UN chief António Guterres urged Thailand and Cambodia to halt escalating border clashes that have killed eight and injured dozens, calling for a return to ceasefire and dialogue. IANS/Washington: The US has revoked 85,000 visas across categories this year as part of tightened public-safety measures, a senior State Department official said. Over 8,000 student visas were cancelled — more than double last year's figure. Nearly half of all revocations were linked to DUIs, assaults and theft. "These are people who pose a direct threat to our communities' safety," the official said, adding that vetting remains especially strict for applicants from high-risk regions, including Afghanistan. Security checks will "take as much time as needed," they stressed.
